DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-12, and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jones (6,060,686) in view of Onuma et al. (5,938,954). Jones teaches irradiating a condensed laser beam generated by a laser source to a certain point of an underwater workpiece (Figure 2, item 18b and 12a); supplying gas to the certain point from a nozzle having a gas exit (Figure 2, Item 22a); the nozzle having an area surround the gas exit that extends to the surface of the workpiece for keeping the supplied gas between the nozzle and the workpiece (Column 3, Lines 25-40), a nozzle is formed as a disk having a gas exit at the center thereof (Figure 2, item 20c and Column 3, Lines 25-40); a welding wire supplied to a certain point (Column 4, Lines 50-65); where the welding wire axis is a wire tip disposed in the nozzle (figure 2, item 26d); where a bush prevents the reflected laser beam from entering the laser source (figure 2, item 20b); irradiating the workpiece at an angle to the workpiece (Figure 1, item 18b); adjusting a gap between the nozzle and the workpiece (Column 3, Lines 45-50); irradiating a condensed laser beam generated by a laser source to a certain point of an underwater workpiece (Figure 2, item 18b and 12a); supplying gas to the certain point from a nozzle having a gas exit (Figure 2, Item 22a); the nozzle having an area surround the gas exit that extends to the surface of the workpiece for keeping the supplied gas between the nozzle and the workpiece (Column 3, Lines 25-40) and where the nozzle is formed as a disk having a gas exit at the center thereof having a flat surface area extending in a circumferential direction thereof and (Figure 2, item 20c and Column 3, Lines 25-40). Onuma et al. teach a nozzle having a circular groove extending in the circumferential direction where the nozzle is formed as a disk and having a flat surface area extending in the circumferential direction in rollers (Figure 7, item 42 base, where the disk is the base of item 42), where the diameter meets the claimed diameter (figure 8, item 50). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the laser of Jones to utilize the nozzle head in order to efficiently remove oxides from the surface of the workpiece (see Onuma et al. col. 15, lines 15-25).

Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jones and Onuma et al. as applied to Claim 9 above, and further in view of Cruickshank et al. (3,632,955). Cruickshank et al. teach separating visible light by a dichroic mirror and inputting the separated visible light into an image sensor (Figure 10, items 66 and 67). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the laser of Jones to utilize the mirror and sensor in order to view the welding with complete operator safety (see Cruickshank et al. Column 5, Lines 30-60).

Response to Arguments

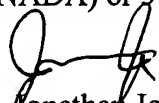

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-13 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
